Corinne Augustine

Corinne Augustine is an experienced Operations executive with over 30 years of diverse industry experience, the past two decades in medical equipment and devices. Most recently Corinne held the SVP Manufacturing and Supply Chain role at Omnicell, a global provider of automated medication solutions. Her prior professional experience includes executive positions with Boston Scientific, Intuitive Surgical, and Acuson/Siemens Medical, Sun Microsystems, and Intel. In her corporate leadership positions, she has scaled, acquired, and divested manufacturing operations which included facilities management and building renovations.

In tandem with her professional contributions, Corinne has served as a volunteer leader in social impact organizations. Since 2007 Corinne has been a founding and governance board member of WANDA, (Women Achievement Network and Development Alliance) supporting low income, single moms achieve economic prosperity. In 2014 Corinne served for fifteen months as one of the first volunteer coaches for Stanford Seed (Stanford Institute for Innovation in Developing Economies) program, where she lived in Ghana while advising CEO entrepreneurs in the West Africa program. Upon returning from the SEED experience, Corinne served a term on the Stanford Graduate School of Business alumni board. She is inspired to contribute to Rebuilding Together Peninsula.

Corinne holds a BS in Industrial Engineering from the University of Florida and MBA from Stanford Graduate School of Business.
